

Name: John Vanden Berg
Email: jvandenber@cvc.org
School: Central Valley Christian School
Grade Level: First

Idea for learning Memory Verse:

In my classroom, I like to work through the memory verse as a class. If the memory verse is too long, I break it up in pieces. First, I write the verse on the board, and have the class recite it out loud with me. Then I erase some of the words and have the student say it again. Although, this time, I do not read the words that are missing. The students must say the words that I leave out. Slowly, I begin to erase the entire memory verse (or section of memory verse) and they can recite it by memory. The students love to see how many words are taken away. This works great in my classroom.